Chapter 4:

Not Very Scary

I should get back. Kat will be waiting.
hmm?
how odd. there should be a door here.
WOOOOOOOO!

Wooooooo!
Wooooooooo!
can I help you?
I'm a ghost! aren't you scared?!
I'm sorry. I can't say that I am.

ugh, I'm so bad at this. so what was I doing wrong? is it the way I look?
well, while I can appreciate your classic look, I don't think anyone has been scared of the "bedsheet phantasam" ensemble for a long time.
and you came on a little strong. actually saying "wooo" didn't help.
but... um, you made the door disappear. that was quite clever yeah?! I can do all sorts of stuff like that!
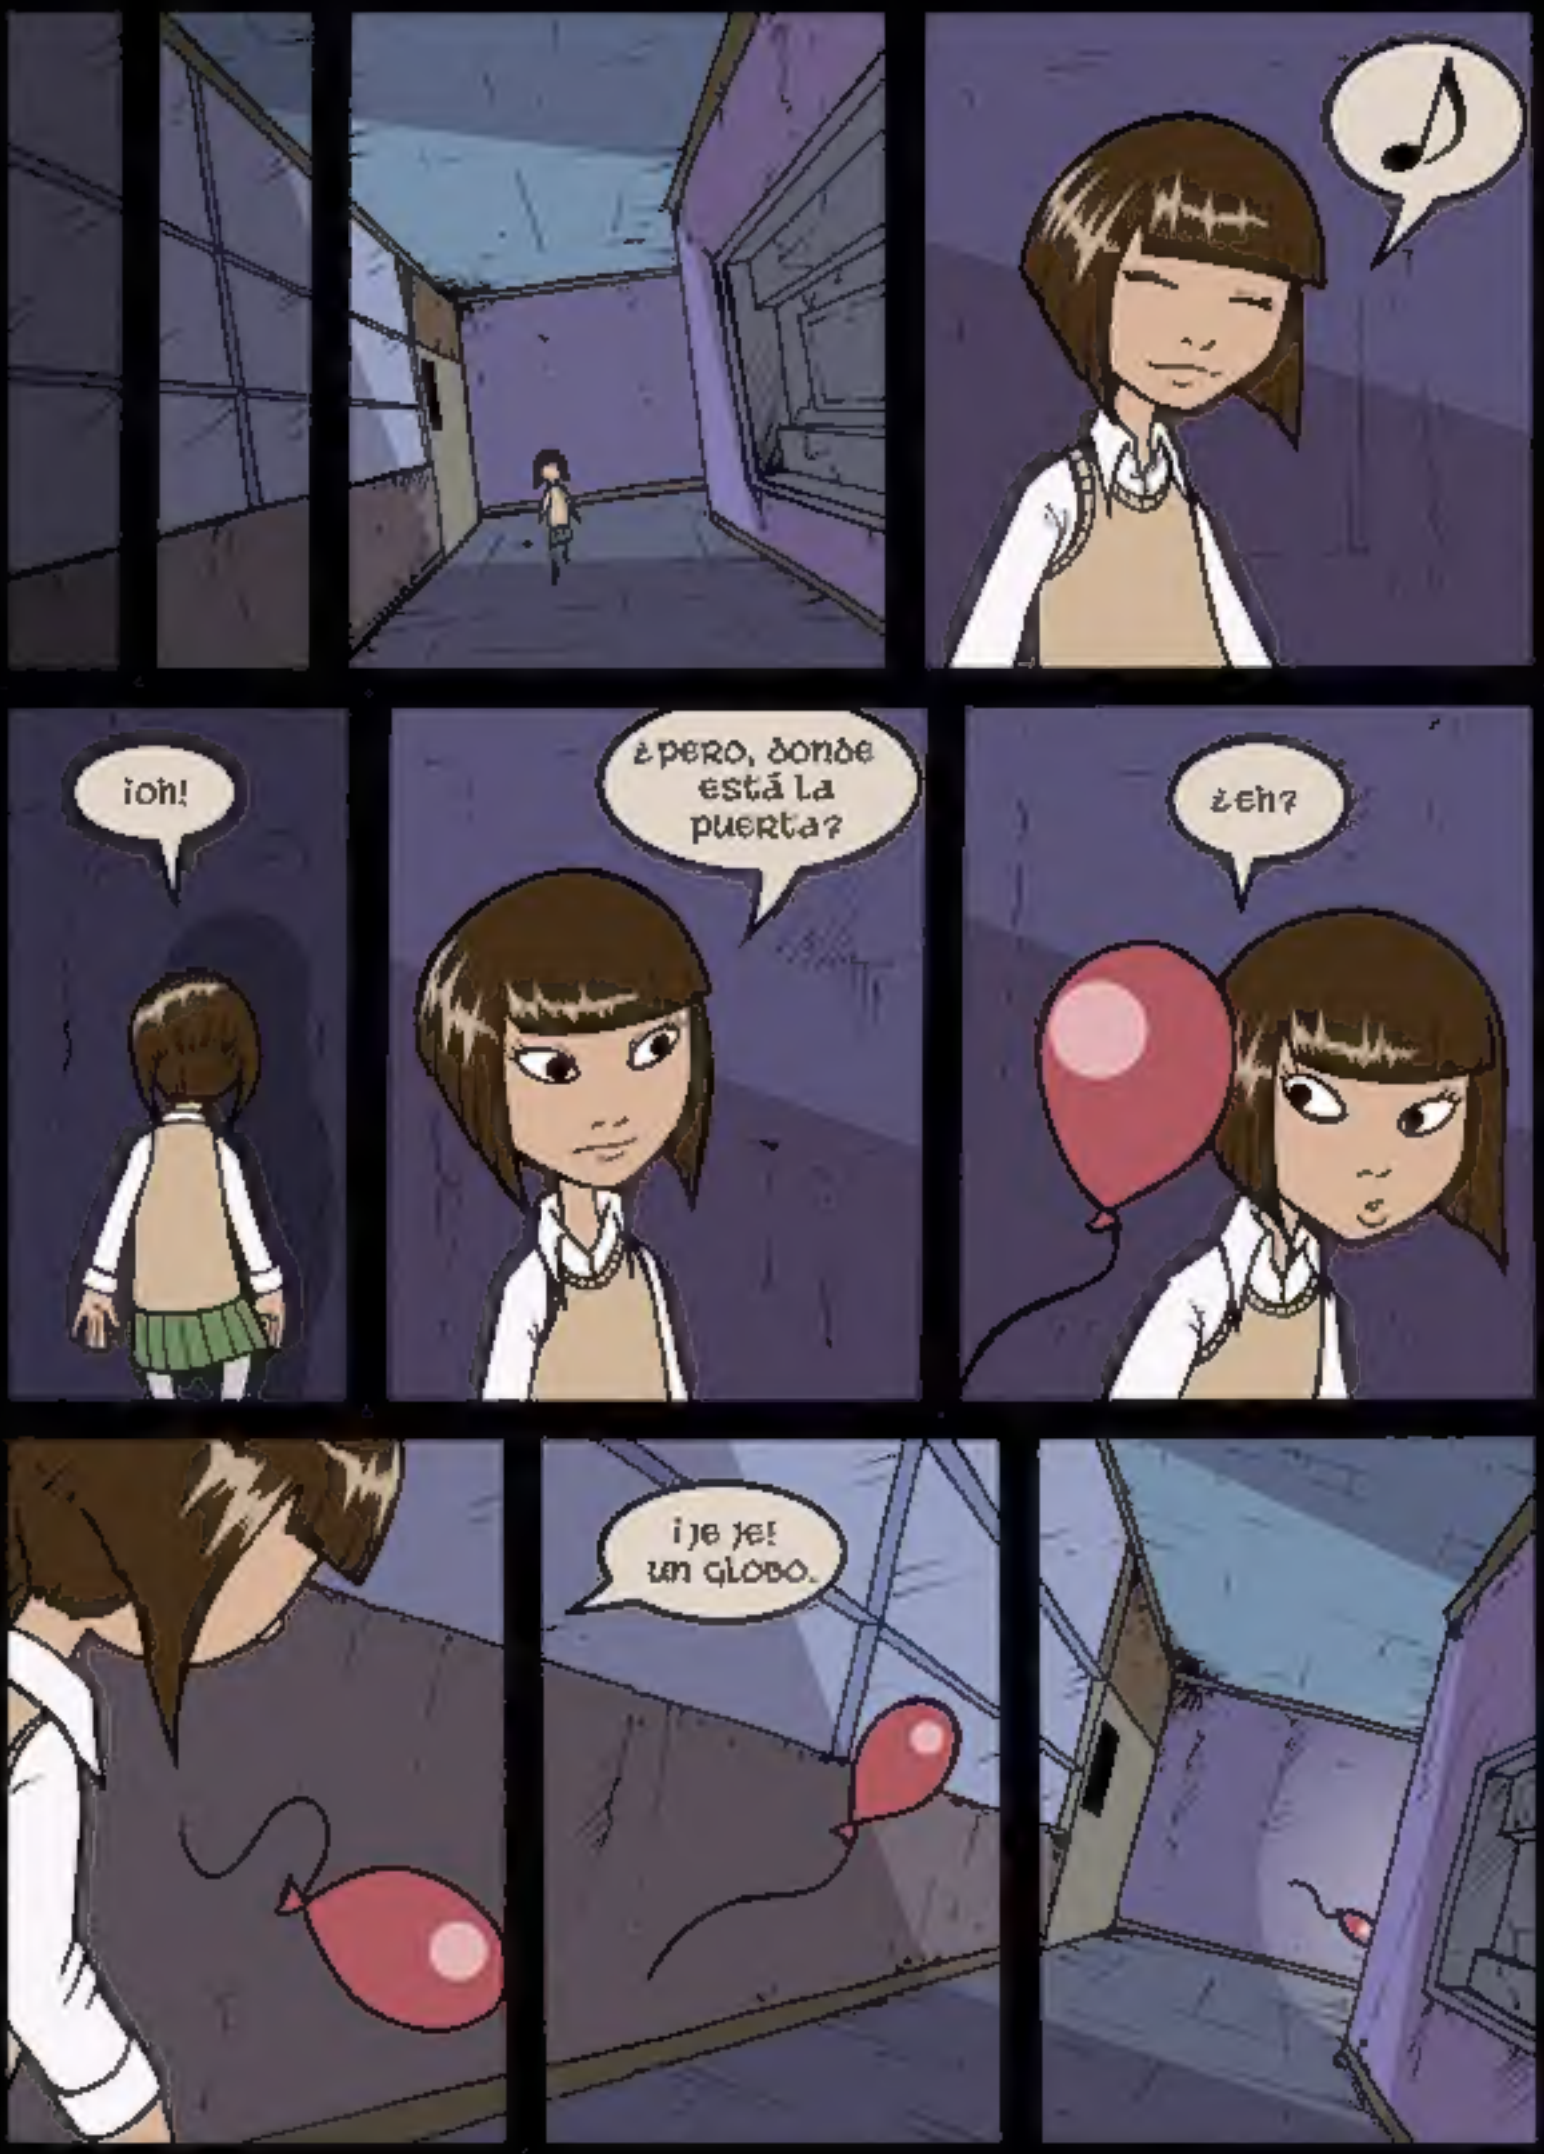
look!
poof!

sometimes subtlety works better than trying to get a cheap scare. you don't need to be so obvious right away.
hmm... like, I should try and be indirectly scary?
I suppose so. try and know your audience too.
find out what scares them and take it from there.
I should try this out!
well, here's something you could try next time...



¡oh!
¿pero, donde está la puerta?
¿eh?
¡je je! un globo.

¿qué?
¿hola?
hello?
uy...
qué asco.

click

qué ojos tan lindos tienes...
clatter
paz.
¿me los darás?
¡aaayyyyyyy!

haw! did you see her run?!
blooo
silenti
well done, mort.
thanks a bunch, annie.
it's lucky you know spanish.
and how did you know that girl didn't like clowns?
nobody likes clowns.
